8 KILLED IN AUTO WRECKS

Here and There

—Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN—

THE Roosevelt old-age pension bill passed the lower house of congress Friday night. It authorizes the federal government to pay any amount up to $15 per month to persons over 65 years of age, providing that the state in which the pensioner lives contributes an equal amount. Thus the maximum pension is $30 a month, and the only requirement is that half the amount be raised by local taxation.

This feature of the bill is attacked by Congressman McClellan, of the Arkansas delegation, who declares "Arkansas can not raise sufficient revenues to match federal funds."

Here's how one of our gracious political hand-wringers performs when broadcasting Arkansas' "poverty" to the world:

This principle (matching state and federal funds), he says, is wrong. The government should deal with its citizens fairly and equitably, disregarding state boundary lines and state citizenship.

Mr. McClellan is just another of that rapidly increasing army of politicians who can tell us how to spend money but haven't a ghost of an idea about how to raise it.

Roosevelt is right and McClellan is wrong.

If Arkansas can match federal highway money, then Arkansas can match federal old-age pension money.

This congressman insults our intelligence.

X X X

We can have anything we are willing to pay for.

We were willing to pay for concrete highways—and concrete highways are what we got.

We wanted new automobiles during the waning panic—and new automobiles are what the people of Arkansas bought in great numbers in 1933 and 1934.

I have nothing but contempt for a baggy-kneed politician who goes around the country shouting that he is a "liberal" and "a friend of the poor and aged" but is unwilling to get on the firing line when it becomes necessary to vote the taxes required to carry out those programs.

This newspaper stands for old-age pensions, and the taxation necessary to produce them.

We hope we never become so unfaithful to a public trust as to refuse to put our money where our mouth is.

X X X

Every intelligent observer knows that the only sound way in which the federal government could advance money on old-age pensions was a 50-50 deal with the states—exactly as our highway financing is handled.

Roosevelt is as good as his word. He has done this.

The issue is now up to Arkansas.

We can vote the maximum state participation of $15—giving a total pension of $30 a month—or any fraction thereof.

It is no criticism of the Roosevelt plan to say that the federal treasury should bear the whole cost.

Pension needs are not the same all over the United States—for living costs are not the same.

Every man knows this.

And we are getting good and tired of our elected representatives going down to Washington and prying themselves out of a political tight place by defaming their home state.

Federal Pension Bill for Aged Is Passed by House

Pays $15 Monthly to Persons Over 65—If State Matches It

McClellan Says State Can't Pay—U. S. Should Bear All the Cost

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The social security bill, designed eventually to levy upward of $2,783,200,000 in new taxes and in return give financial aid to the aged, jobless, children and mothers, was put through the house late Friday by the Democratic majority.

The roll call—372 for and, only, 33 against—ended three months of disputs. Indications were that more word-battering was in store for the measure in the senate.

As approved by the house, the bill embodied everything outlined in the president's message January 17.

Opposition Scattered

Its passage was accompanied by laughter at the small number of opponents and a scattering applause. Many Republicans, who had sought to strip the bill of its new taxes, were forced—to prevent "political suicide," they said privately—to vote for the whole measure.

The seven members of the Arkansas delegation voted for the bill.

The Republicans, on one of their motions, mustered 146 votes with some Democratic aid in an effort to increase from $15 to $20 a month the maximum federal contribution for a needy old age pension. Their motion also included the proposed elimination of the sections levying pay roll and income taxes for future annuity payments to persons under 65 now working.

In the discard—for the rest if this

John W. Ridgdill Appointed Chief of Hope's Police

Former Tax Assessor Chosen Saturday by Mayor Graves

4 NAMED TO STAFF

Police Organization Completed by Administration Sautrday

John W. Ridgdill, former Hempstead county tax assessor, Saturday was appointed chief of police of Hope by Mayor Albert Graves.

Ridgdill succeeds Clarence E. Baker, veteran peace officer.

Ridgdill's policemen will be:

Elbert May, F. B. Ward, H. C. Stuart and Hugh Bearden.

Appointment of Mr. Ridgdill and his assistants become effective May 1.

Selection of Mr. Ridgdill as chief of police came after a study of more than a dozen applications for the job, Mayor Graves said.

100 Applications

Appointments of Mr. Ridgdill's assistants, made by himself with the approval of Mayor Graves, was from a list of applications numbering close to 100.

Mr. Ridgdill is well known in Hope and over the county, having been tax assessor four years. Prior to then he was in the merchandising business here.

Elbert May, originally of Bodcaw, has been aresident of Hope about 15 years. He was formerly in the automobile business at Washington, and at present is engaged in buying cotton.

F. B. Ward, formerly of Blevins, came to Hope about 1925. He is a foreman at Hope Basket factory.

Stuart Former Chief

H. C. Stuart is a former chief of police, serving under the administration of John Vesey. At present he is a field deputy under Sheriff Jim Bearden.

Hugh Bearden, the other member of the force, is well known in Hope. He was connected with the city police force several years ago. At present he is a field deputy under Sheriff Jim Bearden.

Appointment of a chief of the Hope Fire department will probably be made at the first council meeting in May, it was indicated by Mayor Graves.

Veteran Sea Dog to Wed His 15th

11 Wives Divorced Him, He Divorced 1—and the Other 2 Died

NEW YORK.—Ex-Lieut. Commander William Comerford, 47, sea dog and handwriting expert in the recent Bruno Hauptmann murder trial, qualified Friday as the world's champion glutoon for punishment when he announced that he would be married June 1 to Miss Ernestine Smith, 24 years his junior and a native of Java where he father owns a tobacco plantation. Miss Smith will be his 15th wife.

The portly marine officer, questioned as to the fate of the first 14 wives, made some rapid mental calculations and summed up the situation as follows:

"Take Sarah, the first. She committed suicide because of religious differences. Frances, No. 2, was a play girl who roped me into a jail marriage. No. 3 was Dorothy, a fine wife and mother of my son, now 19, but who just wouldn't follow the leader. May, No. 4, was a chisler who two-

Graduation Draws Spring Hill Crowd

W. S. Atkins Speaks at Double Event of Kiwanis Good Will Tour

A crowd estimated at 1,000 jammed the auditorium of Spring Hill High School Friday night to attend graduating exercises of the school and to greet the Hope Kiwanis club on its good will visit to that community.

W. S. Atkins, Hope attorney, delivered the commencement address. Diplomas were awarded to:

Juanita Collins, Gladys Johnson, Dudley Huckabee, Aubry McDowell and Horace O. Phillips. The commencement program:

Processional; Invocation, the Rev. R. A. Cain; Salutatory, Juanita Collins; class history, Dudley Huckabee; Leaves of Autumn (Grady), Hazel Putman; Valedictory, Gladys Johnson; Address, W. S. Atkins; Presentation of Diplomas, Ed Collins; Benediction.

The trip to Spring Hill by the Kiwanis club was the third visit to various Hempstead communities this spring. The Kiwanis program immediately followed graduating exercises.

Charels Danna Gibson, secretary of the club and master of ceremonies, introduced each member.

John Ridgdill's string band was presented in a series of musical number., drawing loud and long applause from the large gathering.

Mr. Atkins made a brief speech, thanking the crowd for its welcome extended to the Kiwanis club. He then explained the $50 essay contest sponsored by the club.

John P. Cox, Hope druggist, spoke on "Good Will," explaining the purpose of the visit and the benefits that can be derived from such an occasion.

John Glass, of the State Forestry Commission, made a brief talk, outlining the forest program which is being launched in southwest Arkansas.

Federal Income Up 26 Per Cent So Far

Up 43 Per Cent for March —26 Per Cent for First Nine Months

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Treasury Friday night reported a 43 per cent upturn in March internal revenue collections and a rise of 26 per cent for the first nine months of the fiscal year.

Collections for the month aggregated $507,304,493 compared with $390,352,846 in March 1934, while the three-quarters total was $2,470,769,668 as against $1,692,339,156 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Income taxes were up 40 per cent during the month; miscellaneous internal revenue was 51 per cent higher, while the agricultural adjustment taxes, which brought $45,558,705 into

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER—

WASHINGTON.—NRA knows how to be honest with itself—but not with the rest of us.

Congress would like to know whether, as Senator Borah has always said, NRA has had the effect of fostering monopolies, monopolistic practices, and monopolistic prices.

There's plenty of evidence that it has and the evidence is to be found in NRA's own files. But investigating senators, considering new legislation, will have to dig a lot deeper before they get it.

Operating with NRA codes, monopolistic industries have frozen high prices solid. Even federal, state and city governments despite a special exempting order by NRA aimed at correcting the evil and saving the taxpayers a lot of money, can't get discounts on their large-scale purchases of many types of supplies.

You can read about it in the NRA Research and Planning Division's study of the effects of Executive Order 6767, issued last June to permit

Plant-to-Prosper Entries to Close

April 30th Last Date to Register for $1550 in Dixie Prizes

Farmers in Hempstead county have until Tuesday night, April 30, to enroll in the Plant-to-Prosper contest and compete for cash awards totaling $1,550 which will be given to winners in the contest this fall. Frank R. Stanley, county agent announced today.

Mr. Stanley explaine dthat farmers desiring to enlist in the contest could secure the proper enrollment blanks at his office, fill them out, and that they would be forwarded to the proper officials before the closing date next Tuesday.

The contest is based on best use of the rented acres, County Agent Stanley pointed out. He emphasized the importance of properly utilizing every available idle cotton acre for food and feed crops, because as he stated, farmers have the best opportunity they have had in years to become self-sustaining through use of the rented acres for growing food and feed crops that are usually bought with cash that should go for other farm and home necessities.

Highwaymen Hold Up Spa Visitors

Garland County Officers Go After Pair of Automobile Gunmen

HOT SPRINGS.—Two robbers, believed to be the same pair that Monday kidnaped and robbed three well known Conway women, struck with success again Friday.

They operated first on the highway leading to Arkadelphia, and their second holdup was perpetrated 12 miles from Little Rock. Their victims were: Miss Lillian Newman, Miss Lucy May Schaer and Miss Archie Collins of Hot Springs. O. B. Runwaldt of Joplin, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. Tom R. Smart of Memphis.

The women and Runwaldt were robbed about 2 Friday afternoon near Bismark on the Arkadelphia highway. Smart, his wife and daughter, were kidnaped and robbed a few minutes before 6 when on their way to Hot Springs. The highwaymen took only money. They got about $25 from the three women, $42 from Runwaldt and $285 from Smart and his wife. The

Georgia Laborites Attack Talmadge

Side With President—F. D. Pleads for Divorce From Politics

BATON ROUGE, La. —(AP)— The Louisiana legislature put the finishing touches Saturday on Huey Long's newest laws as the senate passed a bill giving the state administration control of elections.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Fresh instructions from President Roosevelt to keep politics out of relief Friday night presaged new moves by the administration to restrict public works and relief coffers in several states. The president at his press conference repeated his stand against mixing relief and politics.

Earlier, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, removed the last connection Governor Talmadge of Georgia had in the handling of relief money.

His action amounted principally to cutting Talmadge off from all matters pertaining ti relief. Previously, the federal government had been handling relief in that state but the checks had been sent to Talmadge as a matter of courtesy.

Hopkins sent Georgio $1,700,000 Friday through Miss Gay Shepperson, state relief administrator, for its April needs and arranged also to supply money to Pennsylvania and Missouri. Those staes completed arrangements during the day for making satisfactory contributions themselves.

Labor Flays Talmadge

ATLANTA, Ga.—Friday the Georgia Federation of Labor, in session at Augusta, lashed out at Talmadge for his utterance against the president, charging Talmade "went so far as to insultingly refer to Roosevelt's unfortunate personal affliction."

Lauding the president's efforts to restore prosperity to the country, the labor body expressed its "deep regret in this unwarranted and contemptible action on the part of Governor Talmadge."

"We desire to say to Governor Talmadge," the resolution read, "that President Roosevelt's acts have clearly demonstrated that his heart and head are in no way afflicted, and with apologies to the rest of the nation we regret that we can not say the same for the present governor of Georgia."

Louisiana Session Ends

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long's special session of the legislature Friday night had put all except the finishing touches on his legislation, which, among other things, will give him control of federal work relief funds and supervision over finances of all parishes and municipalities.

Only one measure was delayed, that giving the state administration absolute control of Louisiana's election machinery, but it was expected to go through, possibly with drastic amendment, before sine die adjournment Saturday about noon.

Warns Long Faction

Senator Clemen C. Moss, anti-administrationist of Lake Charles, contended that as the local bodies collected their taxes they shiuld be permitted to expend them. He also declared that the bill threatened to cut off federal relief to the state.

"There are federal funds which are now coming into Louisiana which will

It characterized those deliberations as "a new discrimination" against the Reich.

Todhunter Calls for a Reckoning

Suspended Prison Superintendent to Claim His Full Salary

LITTLE ROCK—S. L. Todhunter, superintendent of the penitentiary, who was suspended Monday by the State Penal Board pending investigation of alleged irregularities in handling penitentiary accounts in 1932 and 1933, which were reported to the governor and the Penal Board by the state comptroller's office, asked Comptroller Griffin Smith Friday to check his accounts up to the date of his suspension and served notice that he would claim his salary as superintendent "until checked out."

Mr. Smith said he would not comply with the request to check the superintendent's records up to date until the Penal Board determines whether Mr. Todhunter will be reinstated.

"If he is reinstated, there will be no necessity of checking him out," Mr. Smith said, "and since this office has maintained a continuous audit of penitentiary records for the past several months, it does not appear to be necessary to check the accounts as of a given date until the board takes final action."

Mr. Todhunter's letter to the comptroller follows:

"As I have collected approximately $150,000 during my administration as superintendent, I would like to be checked up by your office as to my standing at this time. Also, as I have collected something like $2,000 for the clearing of land at the Watson camp I would like to have this land measured and settled for as of April 15.

"Taking into consideration the past facts and circumstances I do not feel like literally turning over the management to some one else until after I am given a clear receipt from your office. I will expect pay as superintendent until I am checked out.

"Please advise me when your auditers can be here and I will be glad to give them all the assistance possible."

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Nervous Business Man Needs Readjustment.

This is the last of three articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein, on nervous breakdowns.

In the typical case of nervous breakdown, you see a man of average intelligence who has prospered in business. He is high-strung and worries about little things. After a while he begins to worry about his health.

On several occasions in the last few years he has been away from his work for short periods because he has had influenza or extraordinary fatigue. Gradually he finds that he is irritable, cannot sleep at night, and also is unable to concentrate.

He may complain of feeling pressure on the top of his head or tightness around them temples. By this time also his food begins to disagree with him and he tries all sorts of cathartics to relieve constipation.

When you question him as to the cause of his depression, he is likely to say that too much has been put on his shoulders in his work or his business, and that all the bad luck has concentrated itself on him.

When you begin to inquire very carefully into his history, you find that he has had a serious quarrel with his partner in business, or that his wife is driving him and nagging him at home.

This man is not seriously sick in the sense of one who has an ulcer of the stomach, an inflammation of the gall-bladder, or a tumor of the brain. He does require, however, the right kind of treatment to recover from his condition.

First step in that treatment is recognition of the cause of the condition.

It is sometimes possible to make adjustments in business to overcome difficulties, and it is occasionally possible to influence those surrounding the individual at home to bring about a lessened irritation from such causes.

Of course, a change of scene, indulgence in some sport or outside interest which particularly appeals to the individual may build up both his body and his mind to a state where the irritations and stimuli have less effect.

It is especially necessary in such cases to restore the habit of sleep and also the normal nutrition. Without sleep and rest, recovery is difficult, if not impossible.

Suitable control of eating habits and digestion of the patient is necessary for comfort and fredom from distress.

Once Again, a Good Tale of Maine Life—"Time Out of Mind" Depicts Decline of Old Family

The chief mystery of the current publishing season seems to be just this: Why are so many first-rate novels coming out of the state of Maine these days?

Such writers as Gladys Hasty Carroll, Mary Ellen Chase, and Robert P. Tristram Coffin have been giving us truly excellent books in which the flavor of Maine life, present and past, is admirably presented. Now comes Rachel Field with "Time Out of Mind," another very readable book in the same vein.

This novel takes up the fortunes of a famous old-time Maine shipbuilding family. For generations this family had owned vast forests, and from them it had made swift sailing ships which voyaged to all corners of the earth.

But at the time the story opens—the years immediately after the Civil War—the wooden sailing ship is going into eclipse. The family fortunes decline as steam crowds out the square-rigger.

And the perplexities of the head of the family are increased by the fact that his only son cares nothing about ships, shipyards, or pine trees, but wants to become a musician.

The story, then, concerns itself chiefly with this son, with his sister, and with the girl who loves him. It tells of his unavailing effort to beat the pressure of his environment and work out his salvation as a composer, and of the heartaches which the long fight brings to these two women who love him.

It is a moving and tragic story, told against the background of a dying society and filled with a robust sentiment for a way of life that has vanished from the earth.

Published by Macmillan; the book sells for $2.50.

Crime's Tools Never Should Be Displayed, States Writer

If the government is really in earnest about suppressing crime, one of the first things attempted should be a ban on the publicity given gangsters, alive or dead.

Ask any advertising expert the deepest, darkest secret of his trade. It is first and foremost "publicity," adverse or favorable. Scandal has long been a trick resorted to by unknown fame seekers. Notoriety is as valuable as popularity, as profitable and as sweet.

The professional gangster feeds on it. He swells with pride to think that even when he is dead his guns and his reputation are immortalized.

Thrills for Boys

Every now and then we are astounded to note certain exhibits of weapons, arsenals rather, used by various gunmen in murdering their way through society. This was the "tommy" that mowed down three of one posse; that was the sawed-off shotgun that finished Sheriff Brown. And so it goes. It is like hanging roses on a guillotine.

Pictures are taken and broadcast. Bob says excitedly to his chum, "Dan, lookee there. Gee! I bet he could aim straight, too." And two small boys out of millions thrill to their toe-tips. Jessee James was deified by story and time. Had he a monument as high as Pike's Peak it would not have enriched his memory one millionth part as much as did ordinary lip-service and pen-service. Eventually it raised to a place with the heroes and the gods.

Compared to today's mobsters, that western renegade of the 60's was a ministering angel. Yet, knowing the pernicious influence of display when applied to the wrong subject, we continue to permit it.

Future Robin Hood?

Dillinger is already the acknowledged hero of thousands of boys. In a few years, as one man predicted, we may be hearing of him as another Robin Hood. Already many such stories have crystalized from nebulous imaginings.

The duty of authorities is plain. To suppress display of all weapons. And to ban picture-taking of any such hardware.

I wonder if people know, actually, how very impressionable young boys are. The sooner we represent crime as bitter and ignominous disgrace, the better—to be treated by cold, disgusted silence. And harvests of blood-covered weapons should be thrown quietly into the sea.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Even Oily Skins Require An Anti-Wrinkle Routine

"Oily skins wrinkle, too," says a famous cosmetician who specializes in all types of beauty treatments. "Dry complexions seems to receive the bulk of anti-wrinkling coddling, but the girl with an oily condition should remember that unless she takes steps to eliminate it, she'll have trouble later on."

Without a doubt, soap and water are the best and certainly the cheapest beauty treatments for one who has excessive oil. A complexion brush, or a rough wash cloth, and a lavish supply of thick suds made from a bland soap, should be used night and morning and, if possible, in the middle of the day, too. Rinse carefully afterward and pat on a mild astringent before applying makeup or night cream.

New Pine Cream

Incidentally, there's a new night cream for oily skins on the market right now. Composed of ingredients that tend to check the flow of oil and shrink the pores, it is scented with oil of pine that smells for all the world like a fir forest after a warm summer rain.

With firm upward and outward strokes, the new cream should be smoothed on at night after your face has been washed and rinsed. Allow a little of the excess to stay on while you sleep.

If the muscles under your chin and across your cheeks seem to be getting flabby (this often happens when a skin is oily), better buy a chin strap and wear it at night. If you get a rubber one, cover your skin with a clean cloth that has been soaked in skin tonic before you adjust the strap.

Lefty Grove Wins First of Season

Famed Ex-Athletic Stages Come-Back With Boston Red Sox

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Although touched for nine hits in the six innings he pitched, Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove had some success Friday in his first pitching appearance this year when Boston unloosed a late attack to defeat Washington, 10 to .

Trailing by one run going into the seventh, the Red Sox knocked Bob Burke out of the box, scoring six runs and gave Washington its first defeat. Walberg, who relieved Grove after the former Philadelphia star had given way to a pinch hitter, held the Senators to one hit in the last three innings.

Boston scored twice in the first on Bishop's single and Reynolds' triple, Reynolds scoring when Bluege fumbled Stone's throw from deep right. Cronin doubled in the fourth and came home on Solter's single.

Burke scored on Bluege's triple in the third and the Senators made three more runs on five hits in the fourth, including a triple by Stone and a double by Bolton.

Singles by Bishop, Werber and Reynolds and a triple by Cronin featured the Red Sox seventh inning rampage. Boston got 14 hits to 10 for Washington.

bidders on public contracts to quote prices not more than 15 per cent below those allowable to private purchasers under their codes. (If you can get a copy! Very few are available.)

But you'd never imagine the true state of affairs if you merely read the official report on the study, prepared and addressed to the president after Senator King had asked for it.

It isn't clear just who wrote it, but it's signed by Acting Chairman Donald Richberg of NRA and seems to have been prepared with the dominating idea of suppressing the strong language and sensational conclusions in Research and Plannig Director Leon Henderson's summary of the study.

Executive Order 6767 was a answer to a great howl from federal, state, and city purchasing agents who claimed taxpayers were being soaked by a flood of tie-bids (identical bids) on public contracts.

It was assumed lower bids within the 15 per cent margin would be submitted by supply industries and that there'd be a greater variance of bids.

But look at a few excerpts from Henderson's summary of findings:

". . . the preponderance of obtainable evidence indicates that Executive Order 6767 was only sporadically effective in increasing competitive auction bidding upon contracts to be let by public purchasing agents.

Many Bids Increased

"Out of a total of 85 sets of contracts studied (a total including practically all purchases of the procurement division of the treasury and the bureau of supplies and accounts of the navy), 41 showed an increase in the amount of tie-bidding after the order was issued, 10 showed no change, while 34 showed a decline.

"The percentage of tie-bids increased notably in such industries as iron and steel, paper and pulp products and building materials. It remained about the same in such industries as automotive, paint and varnish, chemical and glass containers, and decreased substantially in nsuch industries as asbestos, scientific apparatus and cement . . .

". . . practically on evidence was found that the order secured to the public exchequers even a fraction of the potential savings which it was hoped a 15 per cent discount upon government purchases would achieve. Almost universally bidders upon public contracts failed to offer a discount . . .

Monopoly Unbroken

"Finally, the order has not served to loosen at all the grip of strongly organized industries upon the prices and upon the consumers of their products. So far as the evidence obtainable for this study is concerned, monopolistic competition has continued and has even been stabilized in many respects by the codes.

"The evidence that is her to be had shows overwhelmingly that these monopolistic or quasi-monopolistic groups have cartelized under the codes to such extent as to bring about increased rigidity and gradual petrification in the price structure. . . .

"A realistic and factual analysis can scarcely have any other outcome than to pose emphatically the question: How can the codes and the NRA be welded into a device which, by promoting fair competitive practices, price flexibility, and industrial stability, thereby brngs about increased industrial stability, thereby brings about increased industrial production and increased real social income?"

All of which was considered too hot to pass on to the public. The official report on the study is full of weaseled phraseology. It even says tie-bids "may indicate the closest kind of competitive bidding," to which purchasing agents will merely reply:

"Oh, yeah?"

The Crown Jewels

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunet, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets Happ's son, NORMAN; his stepson, ROBERT CAISE; MRS. HAPP; and VERA DUCHENE, Mrs. Happ's maid.

That night a note under her door informs Millicent, "The woman in black ermine is here." Millicent sees the woman, tries to follow, but loses her. Millicent goes to the chauffeur's quarters. The chauffeur is dead from a bullet wound.

Next morning SERGEANT MAHONEY takes charge of the case.

Over the telephone Mrs. Happ learns that her husband has been kidnaped. She is warned not to inform the police.

Millicent tells Norman all she knows of what has happened. They locate the store where the whisky found in the chauffeur's room was sold. They also learn that the owner of the car Millicent saw the woman in ermine driving is PHYLLIS FAULCONER, and go to her apartment. Norman is trying a key in the lock when Millicent stops him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIII

NORMAN HAPP whirled impatiently and exclaimed, "What's the matter?"

Millicent dragged him away from the door, toward a turn in the corridor. "Look!" she said. "Getting out of the elevator!"

Happ raised his eyes and saw Robert Caise swinging down the hallway, his figure silhouetted against the light which flashed brilliantly over the elevator door.

Millicent knew that at any moment Caise would raise his eyes and that he was bound to discover them. The corridor was not brightly illuminated, save for the place above the elevator shaft. Anyone entering from the bright daylight would, of necessity, require a few moments to adjust his eyes to the dim illumination of the corridor. This was all that had kept them from being discovered.

There was a bend in the corridor some 20 or 30 feet beyond where they were standing but there was no time for them to reach it. Millicent grasped Norman's arm and pulled him into a doorway—a questionable place of concealment, but infinitely better than standing in plain sight.

"Keep quiet," she whispered.

"But he's going to walk right past us," Norman Happ objected.

"No, no! He's going to Apartment 309."

The pair stood flattened against the doorway, hardly daring to breathe. But Caise was so preoccupied that he hardly glanced down the corridor. He paused before the door of Apartment 309, hesitated a moment, then raised his hand and knocked on the panels. Millicent noticed the manner in which he knocked—a peculiar rhythm, two knocks, a pause, two more knocks and then a single knock.

THERE was no answer and Caise had apparently expected none. It was as though the knocks had been some signal that had been agreed upon. He took a key from his pocket, fitted it in the lock and went in.

Norman Happ said grimly, "That settles it. Bob is mixed up in this thing and I'm going to pull him out of there by the collar and drag him down to the police station. . . ."

"No, no!" Millicent said. "We've got to get evidence. It's going to take something that we can use to convince the police. He'd say he had found the key or that someone had loaned him a key, or something of that sort. We've got to find out just why he went to that apartment."

She could feel the muscles of Norman Happ's arm quivering through his coat sleeve. He was like a hound held in leash.

"Well, what are we going to do?" Happ asked. "We can't stand here waiting for him to come out."

"Hurry," she told him. "We'll run own to the bend in the corridor and wait there. We can watch and see when he comes out."

She tugged at his coat sleeve and after a moment's hesitation he accompanied her.

They gained the bend in the corridor, turned and stared back at the door of the apartment in which the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer was registered.

It seemed to Millicent as though it had been almost 10 minutes, although she realized the interval must have been shorter, when the door opened and Bob Caise stepped into the corridor.

He jerked the door shut with that sullen violence which characterized him when he was in a temper, and strode toward the elevator.

"He's mad as the devil about something," Norman Happ said. "I know him well enough to know when he gets one of those fits of black rage."

MILLICENT shuddered and said, "Surely you don't suspect that . . ."

"Don't ever fool yourself," he told her grimly. "I'd suspect Bob Caise of anything. Do you know what I believe? I believe there's a chance my father is being held prisoner right in that room."

"Why, Norman Happ!" she said. "Do you mean to tell me Bob would do anything like that!"

"When my father dies," Norman said, "Bob expects to come into a lot of money."

"Would your father leave it to him?"

"No, but Cynthia would inherit it, and Bob figures on getting his share. He's a crooked schemer and he's smart as the very devil."

Bob Caise jerked back the elevator door, entered the cage and a moment later the door slid smoothly closed.

Norman Happ said to Millicent, "I'm going to find out what's in that apartment."

"And then what?"

"That," he told her, "depends on what we find."

He led the way down the corridor, came to a halt before the door of Apartment 309. He took the keys from his pocket, tried one in the lock, gave an exclamation of disappointment, inserted another and said in a half whisper, "This is going to do it."

Millicent heard the bolt click back, and Norman Happ pushed his way into the room, saying, "Let me look around before you come in. It may be dangerous."

She had no intention of allowing him to face any danger which that room might hold. She was, moreover, impelled by curiosity to find out just what was in this mysterious apartment. So strong was this curiosity that it wasn't until after she had entered the room and heard the door slam shut behind her that she realized she and Norman Happ had feloniously broken into an apartment rented by a woman whom neither of them knew.

"Please be careful, Norman," she cautioned.

He turned to flash her a reassuring smile. "Don't worry, Millicent, they won't catch us. If anyone comes in I'm going to start a fight. You make an escape while the fight's going on."

"Please don't!" Millicent pleaded. "Please take care of yourself, Norman."

"Forget it," he told her. "No one's come in yet and we can look the place over and get out before anyone does."

He swept his arm about in an inclusive gesture. "Look around," he said, "and see what you can find. We want something that will give us a clew to the identity of the woman who has this apartment, and perhaps we can find some damaging evidence that will incriminate Bob Caise."

HE crossed to the window and pulled up the shade, letting additional light flood the room. The apartment showed evidence of having been occupied recently. There were ash trays in which burnt matches and cigaret stubs were littered about. In the little kitchenet a bottle of Scotch was more than half emptied, two syphons of soda had been drained, and a third was about a quarter full. An ice tray had been taken from the electric ice box and, judging from the water in the bottom of the aluminum pan, some of the cubes had been allowed to melt. Two highball glasses were on the sink, side by side.

Norman Happ started a methodical survey of the ash trays, inspected the various brands of cigarets which had been smoked, segregating those which had the stain of pink lipstick on them from those which had no such color.

Millicent, giving the apartment a quick glance, determined that Phyllis Faulconer was rather a shiftless housekeeper. She flung open the door of the closet, then suddenly recoiled with an exclamation of amazement.

"Norman!" she cried. "Look here!"

He reached her side in three strides, caught her by the shoulder and said, "What is it?"

Even in the excitment of the moment she recalled with a thrill of satisfaction that his first concern was for her. His eyes were not on the interior of the closet but upon her white, startled countenance.

"What is it?" he asked. "What startled you? Get back of me. Let me handle it."

"No, no, silly," she told him, laughing. "There's nothing to fight. Just look there in the closet."

She nodded toward the dark interior.

For a moment he failed to observe that which she indicated. Then, as his eyes accustomed themselves to the darkness, he gave a quick intake of his breath.

"Good Lord!" he said. "So that's it, is it? That's what we've been chasing."

Republicans Think Tenant Bill Beaten

May Be Returned to Committee—"Would Put U. in Land Speculation"

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Coalition opposition to the Bankhead bill to provide 3,000,000 tenants and sharecroppers with homes and farms through easy loans Friday led one Republican authority to predict its defeat.

Democratic leaders refused to concede this, but made no claims as to whether they could prevent the measure being sent to the banking committee for further study. Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, said he would propose to have the bill returned to the committee Monday. There will be no session Saturday. The bill originally was reported by the agriculture committee.

The measure would set up a federal corporation with a billion-dollar fund, from which loans for as long as 60 years would be made on easy terms.

Senator Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, said the bill ought to be "committed to the janitor." He thought it might be called "a bill for the relief of land owners" and added it would lead to land speculation without bringing the results claimed for it. He said it also should be entitled a "bill for the relief of farmers who have been put on the relief rolls by the AAA."

The Iowan said the government had authorized $1,350,000,000 of government-guaranteed bonds and that payment-guaranteed bonds and that Bankhead proposed another billion to "put the government into the real estate business." This could not be done under the condition, he added.

Byrd previously had contended that passage of the bill would lead to other similar proposals to assist other classes in the same economic status.

"Oda, the ninth, came from Viking stock and I thought she was just what I wanted, but she couldn't stand the sea. Betty, No. 10, had no romance in her soul and Vivian, the 11th, was a widow and married me only for her children's sake. Lucy, the next one was shanghaied by her family, and Elsa, No. 13, preferred business to living with me, the last, chose to leave me rather than be deported from her native country.

"That makes up the list," said the overly-married seaman. "11 of my wives divorced me, I divorced one and two died."

ton adjustment program have idle acres on which they are being paid rentals by the government, and still they are given the use of these acres for growing products which can be consumed on the farm and in the home, Mr. Stanley stated.

With this condition existing, farmers have an excellent chance to fill pantry shelves, cellars, and barns with food and feed which will permit them to live at home. All farmers who use rental acres in this manner are eligible to enter the Plant-to-Prosper contest if they enroll before the closing date.

The following farmers have enrolled in the contest and will compete in the contest: G. M. Cannon, R. H. Bryson, W. B. Jones, Earl Holt, A. A. Rogers, V. M. McKee, H. W. Timberlake, J. W. Ray, W. E. Lee, H. H. Huskey and T. A. Cornelius.

the Treasury during the month were up 25 per cent.

Calculations from March income tax returns disclosed that corporations fared slightly better than the individual during 1934. The corporations paid $139,776,550 in taxes, an increase of 42 per cent over a year ago, while individuals paid $182,135,312, a jump of 39 per cent.

Liquor taxes produced $32,826,116 for the month, an increase of $4,607,192 over last year. For the year to date they returned $360,268,391, a gain of $128,282,380 over the previous comparable period. Liquor was not legalized until early in December, 1933, which struck five months off the comparable period.

Stamp sales during the month indicated withdrawal of 8,831,706 proof gallons of liquor and 3,257,717 barrels of beer, compared with 7,049,165 proof gallons of liquor and 2,630,608 barrels of beer in March, 1934.

Cigarette consumption was higher during the month. Withdrawals were 10,199,611,809, compared with 9,333,113,760 in March last year.

An Easter Prayer

God, always let my heart respond to beauty,
God, never let me grow too old to see
The making loveliness of early April,
The wonder of a newly budded tree.
God, never let my senses dull to color,
Or to the majesty of bells that chime,
Or to the glowing purity of lilies
That come to bless the world at Easter-time.
God let me see the blessed resurrection
That lives in every singing blade of grass,
And let me hear the whispered note of gladness
That is the soul of gentle winds that pass,
God, let me know the vivid thrill of being
That came one spring, to fling a tomb's door wide—
God, let me know anew your boundless mercy,
That is the symbol of the Eastertide.

"If this bill is passed the state of Louisiana will seriously suffer. The $4,800,000,000 relief bill has recently been enacted by congress. If the state gets no share of that money you can take the responsibility."

Senator Lindsey said the bill was aimed at preventing local governing agencies from "going hog wild" on financial matters.

"To my mind it is absurd to say the federal government will change its administration of relief funds because the state of Louisiana is trying to attend to its affairs."

That bill, along with the other administration measures, was passed by a vote of 29 to 10.

When word of the robbery reached here, Chief of Police Joe Wakelin took a posse to the scene. He obtained a good description of the robers, who were driving a coupe believed to be the one that was taken from the three Conway women.

Runwaldt said that he noticed two men standing around the car that contained three women, and stopped to offer assistance. He found himself confronted with a gun, and the pair proceeded to rob him.

Officers of Garland county joined at the scene officials from Clark and Saline counties, but no trace of the pair could be found. One of the robbers had a Luger pistol.

Christ's Death on Cross Is Pictured

Rev. Guy Holt Concludes Pre-Easter Series Saturday Night

The picture of Christ dying on the cross painted in words Friday night by the Rev. Guy Holt, pastor of First Christian church, in his pre-Easter meeting, was minute in detail, depicting the journey from the palace of Pilate to the city gate that led out to the Place of a Skull—the delay at this gate as they laid the cross on the shoulder of Jesus—the terrible scene of Judas having hanged himself and falling, burst assunder and the dogs feeding on the body—the procession becoming slower as they begin to mount the hill—Jesus falling under the weight of the cross, and the Roman soldier and Barabbas the robber chief attempting to make Jesus arise and bear the cross, which He tried to do, but from weariness was unable to do—and they forced one Simon to bear it for him—and finally reaching the top of the hill, and the cross of Jesus and the two thieves thrown down upon the ground there.

The Rev. Mr. Holt then led his audience into imagining they were looking over the crowd to see whom they could recognize in it—and they saw Mary the mother of Jesus, Mary the sister of Martha, who was also there with their brother, Lazarus, whom Jesus had raised from the dead, the man healed of leprosy, the blind man whose sight Jesus had restored, the widow of Nain and her son whom Jesus had brought back to life, and many other whom he had blessed and healed.

Then the pastor led them into seeing the crucifixion, the nailing to the cross of the first robber, who fought and cursed the crucifiers, then the second who bore it all bravely, as if to show Jesus had to die like a man. Then the stripping of Jesus, the laying of Him on the cross, the placing to the transverse beam, and the quick of the nail in his hand as it was held thuding stroke of the mallet as the nail was driven in, then the other hand, and then the feet were placed one above the other and a long copper spike driven through them and the groan failing from the lips of Jesus. Then the raising of the cross and dropping it into the hole that had been cut in the rock. The strain and suffering of Jesus on the cross as he hung there.

The railings of the mob, the words of Jesus, and the unusual darkness and lightning and earthquake, the splitting assunder of the rock, the bursting of the grave with the bones being hurled out, were all pictured. Then the death of Christ as He hung there on the cross, and the anguish of his friends and followers, as they realized that this One in whom they had believed and trusted, hung there dead, was very vividly portrayed. Mr. Holt then pictured the cross being gently taken down, by those who loved the Nazarene, and tenderly they drew the nails from His hand and the spike from His feet, and taking the body of the Savior of the world and laying it gently upon a rude bier bore it slowly, lovingly, tenderly down the hill of Calvary, and burying it in the new tomb of Joseph. Then the approach of the Roman soldiers who placed a guard around this tomb, and the tomb sealed by the Roman government.

Then Mr. Holt pictured the departure from the tomb of those heartbroken and weeping lovers of Jesus, who even in their great despair continued to love Him even in death.

Mr. Holt's closing remarks were: "Jesus is still dead and in the tomb to many people, till this day, for they have never opened their heart to Him. They have never accepted Him as their Savior, their Christ, their King, their Lord, but have left Him dead and in the tomb and have gone on life weary way and forgotten Him." Mr. Holt asked the one question "Is Christ dead to you, or can you realize that He is alive and liveth forever?"

Mr. Holt will bring an unusual message Saturday night at 7:30 p. m. entitled, "Christ Among the Dead."

The STORY of EASTER

While Mary Magdalen and a group of holy women went sorrowfully toward the sepulcher to embalm the body of their Lord, an earthquake occurred. Arriving, they found the stone rolled back from the entrance, and entered. Angels met them, and they were informed that Jeses was risen. Soon afterward, Peter and John, told of the Resurrection by Mary Magdalen, arrived, examined the selpulcher, and believed. After they left, Mary Magdalen remained behind, weeping. To her the Lord appeared, bidding her say to His disciples, "I ascend to My Father and to your Father, to My God and to your God." For forty days afterward, the risen Saviour appeared now and then to chosen witnesses. At the end of that time, He led His apostles out of Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives. There, after preparing their minds for the carrying on of His work, He lifted up His hands, rose from their sight, and slowly disappeared in a cloud.

THE END.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH
Guy D. Holt, Pastor

We have set as a goal, 150 in attendance at our Bible school for Sunday morning beginning at 9:45 a. m. Will you help to make this goal by coming? Those who habe the box for a Home Mission Offering be sure to bring them with you.

We will honor Easter with a Sunrise prayer meeting at 6:15 a. m. Sunday morning and we want to urge the young people to be pleasant at this most glorious worship period.

At the morning service the pastor will bring the final message in his series of Easter sermons, "Christ Risen From the Dead."

We will have an unusual evening service, apart of which will be the burial in baptism of those who have confessed Christ, the minister will bring a message at this hour on "Victory."

We would like to have everyone who can attend one or all of these services Sunday. If you cannot attend our services Sunday, be sure to go to church somewhere.

Home Clubs

Washington

The Washington Home Demonstration club met April 12 in the home of Mrs. E. R. Timberlake. The meeting was opened with reading of 23rd Psalm by Miss Lively and prayer by Mrs. Elmore.

Roll call and minutes of previous meeting were read by the secretary. Sixteen members and one visitor were present. The visitor joined the club.

An interesting talk was given by Miss Helen Griffin and picture framing and hanging of same in the home. She then demonstrated the different kinds of seams in making dresses and explained the house dress contest, also the church or afternoon dress contest.

The home management leader resigned and Mrs. R. W. Patterson was appointed in her place.

Adjourned to meet the second Friday at 2:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Melson Frazier.

McCaskill

The Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. J. Y. Roberts, on April 9. The meeting was called to order and the devotional reading read by the president, Mrs. S. F. Leslie. Prayer led by Mrs. J. Y. Roberts.

There were nine members and two visitors, and one new member present.

Miss Griffin gave an interesting demonstration on sewing. How to make different kinds of seams, also different styles and the different types of people should wear.

The hostess served delicious refreshments.

We were sorry that so many were unable to attend on account of the afternoon being rainy. We hope to have better weather and a large attendance at our nexe meeting, which will meet at the home of Mrs. Creth Eley on May 14. At that time we will have our reports read by the different leaders, as there was such a few present, it was decided to turn the reports in at the next meeting for two months. We also hope at this time to have several of our members to tell us they have decided to enter the dress contest, which will be at the next council meeting.

The next demonstration will be on canning.

Central Home Ec

The girls in the Central Home Economics classes entertained their mothers with a luncheon Thursday at noon in the home economics room. The color scheme and favors were yellow and green, denoting the coming Easter season. Place cards were rabbits with their eggs and favors were yellow roses and ferns. The tables were arranged in the form of an H to mean home and happiness.

The girls and their mothers numbered 35. During the serving the following program was given, with Miss Thelma Woosley as toastmistress: Prayer—Mildred Andres. Welcome—Mary Stokes. Response for mothers—Mrs. Cofield. Reading—Rebecca Daniels. Memories — Margeurite Easterling. Jokes—Doris Sherman.

The Eighth grade class served the meal in two courses. The menu was: Chicken, dressing, mashed potatoes, English peas, cabbage salad, hot rolls, peach pickles, ice tea, banana pie.

The home ecomonic club has joined the American and Arkansas club association and have had meeting and a part. The girls have been furnishing their home Ec clothing room, by painting it, adding new curtains, several pictures with the help of the Smith-Hughes boys they have a locker for coats and dresses built and by this the room was made more convenient.

The junior high girls entertained their mothers with a tea Friday.

Federal Pension

congress, administration leaders said—were the Townsend, Pope and Lundeen plans. The Townsend and Lundeen plans were rejected as amendments, and supporters of the Pope plan decided not to offer it.

Provisions of Bill

In the form in which it passed the house, the bill would:

1. Authorize an appropriation of $49,750,000 next fiscal year, and as much as necessary thereafter, for grants to states which pay pensions to persons who have reached 65. The federal contribution, on a dollar-for-dollar matching basis, would be limited to $15.

2. Levy taxes, beginning January 1, 1937, on pay rolls and incomes for repayment to workers as annuities after they reach 65. The taxes start at one per cent each on employe and employer and rise ½ per cent a year every three years to three per cent each in and after 1949.

3. Put a tax on pay rolls of all employers with 10 or more workers. That would start at one per cent on January 1, 1936, and increase to three per cent January 1, 1938. From this federal tax, an employer could deduct up to 90 per cent of what he had paid to a state unemployment insurance fund, but expenditure of the money would be left almost entirely up to the states.

4. Make smaller appropriations for federal aid to states who give assistance to dependent and crippled children, to mothers, and to persons injured in industry.

5. Authorize additional expenditures for public health work.

Actuaries estimated that the tax for old age annuities would be $560,200,000 in 1938, and increase gradually to $1,887,200,000 in 1950. They calculated the unemployment insurance levy would bring in $501,000,000 in 1938 and $906,000,000 in 1950.

Can Arkansas Meet It?

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Representative McClellan, Democrat, Arkansas, said Friday night that the social security bill passed by the house was "greatly disappointing" and that "it is impossible for Arkansas to meet the responsibility the bill imposes."

Because Arkansas "cannot raise sufficient revenues to match federal funds" for old age pensions, McClellan said citizens of that state "will be denied benefits of the assistance this measure proposes to give."

"This principle of the bill is wrong," he said. "The government should deal with its citizens fairly and equitably, disregarding state boundary lines and state citizenship.

"Under the terms of this bill, the blessings of old age assistance, or an old age pension, will be spread on the table for the subsistence and comfort of some American citizens and at the same time denied to others of the same class and circumstances who can only be regarded as unfortunate because they happen to reside in states that are unable to levy additional taxes to meet the requirements demanded by this bill."

McClellan voted for the bill, but said that he did so realizing "that it won't mean a thing to the people of my state."

"I hope the bill will be amended in the senate," he added, "so as to correct these evils, and make it possible for the act to be administered and distribute the benefits thereof equitably and without discriminating against any American citizens of any state in the union."
